Sarah is a writer director from the UK. She is in development with two new short films VALERIE VENUS and LITTLE THINGS and is currently writing her debut feature IN DEPENDENCE as well as a 30 minute television comedy drama pilot MY FIRST JOB IN ADVERTISING.

A creative and visionary writer and director, Sarah Clift's background is in writing award-winning advertisement campaigns in London agencies, including work for brands such as Adidas and McDonalds as well as directing important government commercials. Sarah made a bold move to directing film and her debut short La Madre Buena arose to immediate worldwide acclaim, screening at Academy and BAFTA recognized film festivals and receiving 38 wins and nominations. Her clear vision and strong unique voice has been noticed by film festivals and audiences around the world. She has been voted Best Writer of the year, Best New International Director, BIFA Longlisted, and has screened work at venues including the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and the House of Commons London. Sarah is currently developing several short and long format projects focusing on unique stories with strong female characters in leading roles. Sarah was selected from over 500 applicants as one of the BFI CONNECT @ London Film Festival 2018 alumni for filmmakers breaking boundaries for their upcoming debut feature films.
